

What if...

...you miss your train?

What if...

...your train is cancelled?

What if...

...you drop your mobile phone on to the railway track?

What if...

...you see a fight on a train?

What if...

...you fall asleep on the train and miss your stop?

What if...

...your train is delayed?

What if...

...you feel ill on the train?

What if...

...you see a bag that has been left on a seat on the platform?

What if...

...a passenger collapses with a heart attack on board the train?

What if...

...the ticket office is closed and the ticket machine is broken, what should you do?

What if...

...a parent puts their buggy (with baby) onboard the train but their toddler doesn't get on the train before the doors close and the train moves off? The toddler is still on the platform.

What if...

...your ticket has fallen out of your pocket and you've lost it. The Onboard Supervisor is walking through the carriage asking to see passengers' tickets.

What if...

...a passenger is sick on board the train?

What if...

...you see a group of teenagers walking across the tracks to get to the other platform?

What if...

...you leave your bag (containing your laptop) on the train when you get off?

What if...

...the train line is closed and you are forced to get off the train 6 stops from your destination?

What if...

...you see someone standing at the very end of the platform? You start to think that they are not there to travel on the train but for other reasons...
